

Abstract

The present invention involves a compression refrigeration system including a compressor, a heat rejector, expansion means and a heat absorber connected in a closed circulation circuit that may operate with supercritical high-side pressure. An apparatus and method are provided to optimize energy efficiency.